International Center for Knowledge in the Arts Initial Symposium, October 24–25, 2019 The Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts Copenhagen

It is a great pleasure to invite you to the symposium inaugurating the International Center for Knowledge in the Arts. The two-day event will present, discuss and implement past and future approaches to knowledge production in and from the various fields of the arts in Denmark.

The symposium addresses selected key areas of artistic research relevant to the center's future work with knowledge in the arts: ① Artistic Connectivity and Networked Knowledge in the Arts; ② The Transformative Condition of Research through the Arts; ③ The Politics of Knowledge; ④ Network of Disciplines in the Expanded Field of the Arts. The new International Center for Knowledge in the Arts is founded by the Danish institutions of higher arts education and anchored at the Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts. It is conceived as a place where common interests of the disciplines of fine arts, film, music and performing arts come together and where current issues relating to artistic research and transdisciplinary knowledge creation are put up for debate.

It is interesting to look at the strong transformative power of research in the arts. How can we embrace the transformative condition of research in society? How can its relevance be seen in artistic projects that seek to change situations in our worlds?

Rogoff is Professor of Visual Culture at Goldsmiths, University of London, a department she founded in 2002. Rogoff was one of the artistic directors of the Norwegian triennial 'The Bergen Assembly' in September, 2016 and editor of The Infrastructural Condition published in its wake. Rogoff is also a co-founder, in 2017, of The European Forum for Advanced Practices. In 2019 Rogoff received an honorary doctorate from Aalto University.

Bencard is a researcher and curator at the The Novo Nordisk Foundation Center for Basic Metabolic Research and at the Medical Museion from where he acquired his Ph.D. He divides his work evenly between practical science and curating exhibitions, teaching and research on 'molecular being': a concept he developed around the idea that human beings are fundamentally part of an expansive, material network extending inside and outside of our bodies.

Eilersen is head of the Directing programme, Head of Artistic research and teacher at the Danish National School of Performing Arts. She has directed sixty stage productions ranging from opera to radio plays, classic drama to new Danish and foreign drama and documentary theatre – from small scenes to major theatres.

The Politics of Knowledge

Moderator:

Jacob Lund
Associate professor, School of Communication and Culture, AU

Investigating aspects of art and artistic research as an apt tool for reformulating common perspectives. Art's power to rewrite and reinterpret the traditionally Euro-American understanding of art is gaining ground, making it incumbent on us to investigate these processes and make them visible.

Seth is Professor of Politics at Goldsmiths. He has published in the fields of modern Indian history, political and social theory, postcolonial theory and international relations and is particularly interested in how the concept of Western knowledge has 'travelled' in and out of the Western world and its consequences.

Panel discussion

Considering local contexts and exploring the extended practices of film, fine arts, music and performative arts in relation to architecture and other disciplines. We raise the question of how art can be enriched by post-disciplinary processes and art research methodologies and investigate how art in public spheres relates to art research as sensory knowledge.
